Guidelines for sustainable development and management of brackishwater aquaculture have been issued to all maritime States and Union Territories in August, 1995. The guidelines outline the measures for development of sustainable aquaculture to reduce the adverse impact of wastes, treatment of such wastes and mitigation of any adverse impact of aquaculture on the environment. The measures suggested in the Guidelines inter alia include:—

(i) Undertaking an environmental impact assessment study at the planning stage itself as a pre-condition for approval for all the aquaculture units abvoe 40 ha. in size.

(ii) Incorporating an Environmental Monitoring and Management Plan in all aquaculture units having a net water area of 40 ha. or more.

(iii) Discouraging conversion of mangroves and productive agricultural land for shrimp farming.

(iv) Prescribing a minimum distance between brackishwater aquaculture units and habitations such as towns and villages, agricultural lands and fresh water sources.

(v) Creating buffer zones between the adjacent aquaculture units for drawal of freshwater.

(vi) Avoiding use of chemicals and antibiotics.

(vii) Improving the soil and water quality.

(viii) Culture management and waste water management/treatment methodologies.

(ix) Using waste water discharged from aquaculture units for secondary aquaculture purposes, and

(x) Prescribing standards for waste water discharge and its disposal.
